The steel walkouts and the threatened rail strike have revived Congressional interest in new anti-strike legislation. But how far this will go is expected to depend upon the action of labor leaders.

Sentiment for such legislation will be formed rapidly if new strike threats develop. It may die out completely if labor tranquility prevails.

It is obvious from the labor legislation so far proposed that there is at the present time no crystallizing of thought on the matter at the Capital.

Some of the major proposals are: (1) The request of President Roosevelt for a National Service ("compulsory draft") Act along the lines of the Austin-Wadsworth bill.

(2) H. R. 3962, introduced by Rep. Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), providing for criminal penalties for strikes in war industries, offered as an amendment to the Smith-Connally Act.

(3) Announcement of Sen. Tom Connally (D., Tex.) that he would offer legislation to amend and tighten the same law with provisions for drastic penalties.

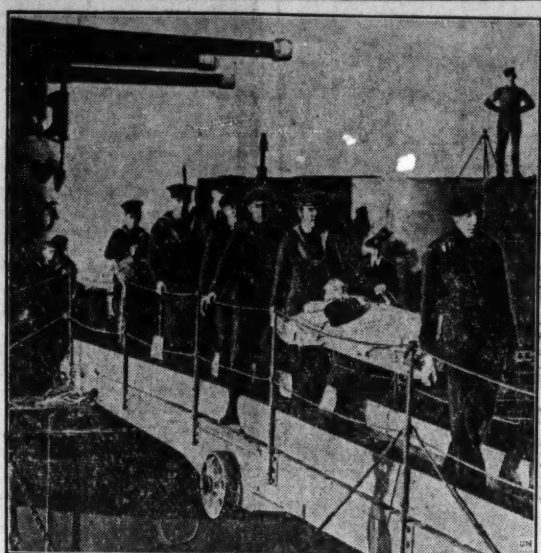

(4) Decision of the Senate Judiciary Committee to begin hearings—after months of postponement—on the House-passed Hobbs Anti-Racketeering Bill making unions liable for violations of the anti-trust laws and Sherman Act.

(5) Meanwhile, there has developed strong sentiment in Congress for the drafting of so-called compromise legislation—a middle of the road program between compulsory draft legislation and criminal penalties.

(6) A measure to be introduced granting greater authority to WLB. Penalties would provide that if an employer refused to abide by a decision, the government should have the right to take over the plant and operate it; and if labor refused to heed the decision, certain rights and privileges would be denied that particular union during the period of refusal.

(7) A measure modeled after the British Labor Disputes Act is being discussed and probably will be introduced.

A wide range of other bills may be expected to be introduced, as it is known that many Congressmen are working on their own ideas of legislation for dealing with the problem.

Health-Recreation News Of Local Y.M.C.A.'s

In the White Oak division of the boys aviation basketball league the Mustangs sneaked out ahead 19 to 17 in a closely contested play-off game with the Aircobras, Thursday, January 27. By virtue of this win the Mustangs will be privileged to play the Thunderbolts an extra game to decide the winner of the first half of the league schedule. The Aircobras will be forced to be content with third place in the first half of the season.

It looked very much like another tie game was coming up as the teams continued on even terms throughout the game, until the last minute of play when the Mustangs went four points ahead, only to have the Aircobras come right back and cut the lead by two points with a field goal, and they were threatening to tie the score as time ended the game.

The Mustangs seemed to have a little better team play. Their passing was just a little more precise. Both teams missed apparently easy shots continuously as the results of attempting too fast play. The game was furious from the start.

The line-up for the Mustangs was: Herbert Smith, Bob Weaver, and Richard Spivey, forwards; James Weaver, center; Wayne Cates and Tommy Ward, guards. Ward and Weaver led in the scoring.

The lineup for the Aircobras: Gene Stone and Wright Archer, forwards; David Yow, center; Jack Campbell, Herbert Hussey and Burl Caviness, guards.

It took an extra period for the Mustangs to down the Warhawks at the White Oak branch, Saturday, January 29th. At the end of the first half the Mustangs were leading by the wide margin of 17 to 7, but, Jones and Davis for the Warhawks got their eyes on the basket and rang up seventeen points between them putting the teams on even terms 24 to 24 as the allotted time for a game ran out. During the extra period Ward and Gene Brisson each shot a goal to put the Mustangs four points in the lead and quickly Hightcock for the Warhawks cut that lead to two points with a field goal as the final whistle sounded ending the game for keeps. Mustangs 28, Warhawks 26.

At the Proximity branch Saturday the games were not so close. The Havocs beat the Liberators 20 to 15 in the first game of the Morning. The Avengers bowed to the Maunderers 12 to 16, in the final game of the day. T. Sewell kept up his steady shooting, having scored practically all the points for the Havocs.

The Junior varsity at both branches got off to a good start in the second half of their league, beginning this week. The Proximity Juniors whipped the Coca-Cola team in good fashion 48 to 23. At the same time the White Oak Juniors crept out ahead of the fast stepping Ravens 20 to 19 in a hard fought game throughout.

A swim meet for younger boys was held at the White Oak branch, Tuesday evening at 6:00 o'clock. About forty-five junior boys participated in the meet. Winners was as follows: 20 yard free style, Harold Owens, first; Bobby Tate second, and Van Burkeman, third. 20 yard free style for boys over 12 years, Harvey Hester, first; Donald Lowe, second, and Gene Ellis, third. 20 yard back stroke, Harold Owens, first; Claud Owens, second; Archie Wheeler, third. 80 yard relay, Wheeler, Owens, Vaughn and Johnson, first; Burkeman, McQueen, Tate and Lankford, second; Owens, Watkins, Wyrick and Ellis, third. Diving, straight, Burkeman, first; H. Owen, second; L. Johnson, third. Back dive, McQueen, Burkeman, Lowe, Swan dive, H. Lowe, Tate, Smith, Jack knife, Burkeman, Hester, Lankford, Optional, Harold Owens, one-and-a-half somersault.

The diversity of religious needs and its success in satisfying them, are indicated in the following letter from L. R. Fowle at Istanbul, Turkey, to the organization's New York office, at 347 Madison avenue:

"Your War Prisoners Aid associates are doing a grand job, and I have been privileged to help along in various small ways. At the present time I am endeavoring, through the Turkish Red Crescent Society, to get permission to send to Germany: Moslem prayer beads for Arab prisoners of war, candles for use in religious services of Orthodox prisoners, both Slav and Greek; candles, altar cloth and robes for a rabbi who is interned with three hundred Jews; one hundred copies of the Koran, in Arabic and Turkish, for Moslem prisoners (Turkish speaking from Crete, and Arabic speaking from Africa)."

The steel walkouts and the threatened rail strike have revived Congressional interest in new anti-strike legislation. But how far this will go is expected to depend upon the action of labor leaders.

Sentiment for such legislation will be formed rapidly if new strike threats develop. It may die out completely if labor tranquility prevails.

It is obvious from the labor legislation so far proposed that there is at the present time no crystallizing of thought on the matter at the Capital.

Some of the major proposals are: (1) The request of President Roosevelt for a National Service ("compulsory draft") Act along the lines of the Austin-Wadsworth bill.

(2) H. R. 3962, introduced by Rep. Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), providing for criminal penalties for strikes in war industries, offered as an amendment to the Smith-Connally Act.

(3) Announcement of Sen. Tom Connally (D., Tex.) that he would offer legislation to amend and tighten the same law with provisions for drastic penalties.

(4) Decision of the Senate Judiciary Committee to begin hearings—after months of postponement—on the House-passed Hobbs Anti-Racketeering Bill making unions liable for violations of the anti-trust laws and Sherman Act.

(5) Meanwhile, there has developed strong sentiment in Congress for the drafting of so-called compromise legislation—a middle of the road program between compulsory draft legislation and criminal penalties.

(6) A measure to be introduced granting greater authority to WLB. Penalties would provide that if an employer refused to abide by a decision, the government should have the right to take over the plant and operate it; and if labor refused to heed the decision, certain rights and privileges would be denied that particular union during the period of refusal.

(7) A measure modeled after the British Labor Disputes Act is being discussed and probably will be introduced.

A wide range of other bills may be expected to be introduced, as it is known that many Congressmen are working on their own ideas of legislation for dealing with the problem.

Below Deck

Recently a talk was made by a veteran of the U. S. Navy before a group of war workers. He told the workers about being below deck during the battle of the Coral Sea with six buddies in a small compartment where it was their job to keep certain machinery going. He said, "I can't tell you how tough it is being below deck during a battle and not knowing what is going on topside. All we could do was do our part the very best we knew how, because we knew that even our small part was important to the final outcome of the battle." The following comment was made by one of those who heard him: "Why, that is true of all of us on the home front. We are all below deck, so to speak, and can't know just how each battle is going for our boys, but we can do our own particular job, whatever it may be, the very best we know how, because it, too, is important to the final outcome of this war."

News this week from the battle fronts, particularly in the Pacific where our boys are facing their hardest and bloodiest engagements of the entire war, should indelibly impress upon the minds of each and every one of us the importance of doing our part and doing it well.

The atrocities committed by the Japs upon their prisoners, many of whom are American boys, has stirred the entire nation. Firsthand descriptions of horrible tortures inflicted upon our boys has brought home to us the type of enemy we must defeat. It has made us realize what would be the fate of all of us back home if such an enemy were to win and eventually control our destinies.

We are beginning to learn what is happening over there, although we in our work can't tell visually just how tough it is.

We cannot afford to take any chances. We, therefore, must truly awaken to the realization that our performances here compare in a way with the performances of many of our boys on the battle fronts although we are spared the dangers and deprivations that they are so bravely facing and enduring.

There is a general feeling, even from the highest places in Washington, that the American people have not truly awakened to their responsibilities and the parts that their performances have in actual combat. Just how this awakening can be brought about, we are frank to admit we do not know. We believe that if each person had to answer that question, each person would find the answer for himself and, as a result, the home front would fight the war by their performances on their own jobs with determination and courage equal to that of our boys actually engaged in battle.

If that sailor who was confined below deck during the battle of the Coral Sea had laid down on his job and that machinery that he was supposed to keep going had become idle because of inattention or indifference, the battle of the Coral Sea might have been different. In fact, if the others on other battleships who had similar duties had all laid down or stayed away from their assignments, we know the outcome of that battle would have indeed been tragic and the entire Pacific war might have been lost.

Women and Homemaking

I've got my dander up over a book I just read. The author thinks houses should be made to run themselves—so women can all have careers!

Goodness knows we all believe in the labor-saving devices industry has given us. But I object to the idea that we women hate housekeeping!

Why, I'd rather keep house than anything. I know hundreds of women who love everything about a home—bringing in the clean clothes, getting supper for the family, sitting down to rest, with the house all newly cleaned and shining.

None of us with a speck of sense would exchange these things for a job, unless we had to earn a living or were really gifted, like a singer or an actress.

Mind you, I'm not talking about the fine women in war jobs. It's normal times I mean.

The happiest woman I know does all her work, though she could well afford help. She and her husband have a big home and enjoy every inch of it. Much of her furniture has been hunted out of barns and attics, its beauty restored, and she loves caring for it as she loves bringing up her small daughter. She gives little luncheons and dinners; she puts up peaches. She sends a casserole of chicken to a neighbor, and takes a friend's child for the day. My point, you see, is simply that many women love to keep house.

Still, my friend has time to head the Red Cross speakers' bureau. Which brings up another aspect of our women question. A stay-at-home radio—I'll be with you again next week!

WIREPHOTO FROM MOSCOW shows President Edvard Benes of Czechoslovakia and President Mikhail Kalinin of the Soviet Union after the signing of a 20-year treaty, pledging common action and mutual assistance should Germany ever try to renew her policy of drang nach Osten (drive to the East). This friendship treaty also calls for economic collaboration after the war, binds both states not to interfere in each other's internal affairs, and invites neighboring countries not allied to Germany to participate. ### Balloon Cloth Fashion Headliner For 1944

Speaking of cottons, the headline fabric for 1944 is balloon cloth. This fine cotton has so many good qualities that, while originally ordered for barrage balloons, textile manufacturers will doubtless keep on making it for clothes and accessories after hostilities cease. It has great tensile strength (58 pounds for both warp and filling) and is made of evenly spun combed yarns. Fuzz is removed by singeing and all sizing taken out so that the cloth has a smooth, even texture and excellent drapability.

That's why the Army's release of this cloth for civilian use created a fine flurry in the fashion world. It was a windfall for converters and cutters-up who were frantically searching for substitutes for the fine combed-yarn cottons of which the war had deprived them. Only three or four yards of this fine cotton are required for a dress, whereas 2,000 yards are needed for one barrage balloon!

How did it happen that there were four million extra yards of this exceptional cotton cloth on hand? Well, about a year and a half ago when the threat of air invasion on both coasts was making the country nervous, the War Production Board requested mills to produce as much as three million yards monthly for barrage balloons. Production, says the Cotton-Textile Institute, actually exceeded 2,500,000 a month. This quota was reduced when the fear of enemy attacks from the air subsided and when it seemed improbable that we would have any air invasion in this country, the Government released the four million yard surplus on hand for civilian use.

Printed and plain, balloon cloth is appearing in all the important collections of clothes and accessories for 1944. Dainty floral designs of English inspiration, polka dots, coin dots, stripes and wallpaper floral stripes, as well as border prints and clear, bright colors and pastels were "naturals" for balloon cloth.

Of course, it's proved a favorite for playclothes of every type in all its variations, and in its striped incarnation, turns up as a two-piece bathing suit with matching play suit to go over it—and a skirt of plain balloon cloth in the same color to turn it into an entire costume. Edged with ruffles around the portrait neck and short sleeves and on the dipping front peplum. Balloon cloth gets set to play hostess, go visiting, or step out with "that man home on leave."

It appears as a junior girl's dress in a floral-and-eyel print, accented with eyelid bands around the square neck and sleeves. Striped red and white, it adds flattering white frills on pockets, sleeves, and round neck to "pretty" up a simple dirndl-skirted style. In coy pink, it shows up as a petticoat dress, one of the coming season's hits. As a sophisticated brown and white print trimmed with lingerie bows, it's all set to shine on city streets when warm weather comes, for a cool appear-
